Project Narrative

Project Description

The Youth Offender Demonstration Project is a component of the El Paso Police Department's (EPPD) Youth Initiative Program (YIP). The project employs a culturally and linguistically relevant, holistic approach that partners community agencies, schools, churches, and businesses with the EPPD to target gang prevention for El Paso's at-risk youth. The Youth Offender Project mobilizes the community to provide intervention and prevention services for the city's most vulnerable youth.

Gangs and drugs are serious problems in El Paso County. In 2000, the EPPD reported that approximately 5,500 persons belonged to a gang, compared to 2,250 in 1992. In a two-year period from 2000 to 2002, the El Paso County Juvenile Probation Department processed 1,713 juvenile gang members and 1,565 juvenile drug offenses.

In response to the rising number of at-risk youth recruited into gang activity, the EPPD instituted the Youth Offender Demonstration Project in 2003. This project, funded through a grant from the Department of Labor (DOL), utilizes a case-management/family centered approach that emphasizes pre-employment education and job placement, assets training, life skills, anger management, referral services and home visits. Young people ranging in age from 14 to 24 years who participate in the program receive an Individualized Service Plan that helps them to set life goals for education and employment. Additionally the project coordinator performs an overall assessment for each young person that evaluates their family support system and identifies needs for follow-up services with partner agencies.

Supplementing the project's case management activities is a robust educational curriculum for young people, parents and the community-at-large as well as specific training for law enforcement and educators. The case manager and police officers assigned to the project assist young people who find themselves in a gang to "jump out" and sever their ties with gang activity. Seminars and events are conducted regularly on topics including gang interventions, violence prevention, anger management; youth job expo, life skills and health issues. Project staff assists participants to develop positive working relationships with employers as part of a subsidized summer employment program. Outreach sites range from public, private, and parochial schools to community sites including:

Overview of the Community

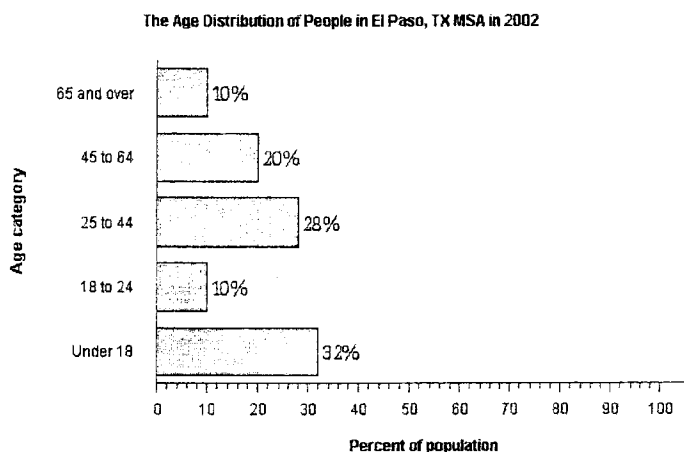

El Paso, Texas is the fifth largest city in the state and is the 22nd largest city in the U.S., with a 2000 census population approaching 700,000. Predominately Hispanic (72%), El Paso is contiguous with Ciudad Juarez, Chihuahua, Mexico, a community with a population approaching 2 million people. This bi-national community is the largest metropolitan area along the 2,000-mile U.S. - Mexico border. A corresponding effect regarding gang recruitment is evident in the organized narcotic trafficking gangs along the U.S./Mexico border.

In El Paso, approximately 30% of residents live below the Federal Poverty Level, making it one of the four poorest metropolitan areas in the nation. Poverty and the lack of a stable family support system are two of the leading indicators of gang participation. 2000 Census data indicate that U.S./Mexico border areas, including El Paso, consistently rank in the lower 50 percentile in educational and economic attainment. When compared to other communities in the nation's 331 Metropolitan Statistical Areas (MSAs), El Paso, Texas ranks¹:

- 4th highest in the % of families in poverty
- 217th in median household income
- 215th in the % with a high school diploma
- 209th in the % with a bachelor's degree or higher

El Paso's median household income is just $28,439, compared with median household incomes of Texans, $39,927, and all Americans, $41,994.² Per capita income in the county remains chronically low at $13,400. El Paso is a federally designated "Medically Underserved Area" (MUA) with a significant percentage of the county's population living in designated "Health Professions Shortage Areas" (HPSA). An estimated 34% of El Pasoans do not have any form of health insurance or health benefit coverage.

Age: According to the American Community Survey Profile for 2002, El Paso County has a relatively young population. The 2002 Census estimates for the El Paso MSA indicate the following:

Source: Census Bureau's American Community Survey Profile for 2002

¹ Source: City of El Paso Department of Planning and Research, 2003.

² Source: www.census.gov/quickfile/

While the median age for Texas was 32.3 years in 2000, the El Paso County area had a median age of 30.9 with 32% of the population less than 18 years of age. This percentage indicates that 224,000 young people are under the age of 18 in El Paso County. Adolescents under 18 are the principal age group for gang recruitment.

Poverty: According to the Census Bureau's American Community Survey Profile for 2002 thirty percent of El Paso residents live in poverty. Thirty-seven percent of related children under 18 were below the poverty level, compared with 20 percent of people 65 years old and over. Twenty-four percent of all families and 43 percent of single female parent families have incomes below the poverty level. Thirty-eight percent of households in El Paso's MSA received means-tested public assistance or non-cash benefits.

Project Need in the Community

Young offenders from El Paso County who are committed to Texas Youth Commission facilities have problems related to chemical dependency, educational deficiencies, poverty, and gang involvement. In addition, they often come from families having problems with substance abuse and the criminal justice system. These factors all complicate the challenge of rehabilitating these adolescents, placing them at high risk of future criminal involvement and incarceration as adults. According to data from the On Ramp Youth Foundation, there are 445 active gangs in El Paso as of March 2004 (www.stormpages.com/onrampelpaso/gangaffiliation.html). The combination of poverty, high unemployment, few educational resources, and a significant number of young people without a stable family environment contributes to the growing rate of gang recruitment in El Paso County.

The focus of the EPPD Youth Offender Project is to assess and intervene in the lives of at-risk youth and provide them with the critical thinking and life skills to counter the false allure of gang recruitment. The project helps to direct young people into employment opportunities and prospects for higher education as meaningful alternatives to a gang lifestyle. The ultimate goal of this project is to serve as a community resource for young people with life barriers to achieve their full potential and capacity for a productive life. Evidence of the project's success is demonstrated by the fact that 95% of the young people enrolled in the project do not re-offend and 70% have remained in school.

Project Activities

Ninety participants are currently enrolled in the Youth Offender Project. Participants are recruited from two at-risk categories:

1. At-risk Youth Court/Gang Involvement consists of youth who have not been adjudicated or convicted for committing delinquent behaviors or illegal acts but who have risk factors including poverty, drug and alcohol abuse, gang involvement, and a lack of supportive and/or stable family environment.
2. Youth Offenders are young people who have been adjudicated, convicted for committing delinquent acts such as crimes against persons, crimes against property, status offenses, and crimes related to substance abuse.

Since the Youth Offender Project's inception in 2003 over 720 young people have participated in seminars, trainings, and received case management and referral services provided through the program. Over 185 community agencies, churches, schools and business have participated and contributed support services for youth enrolled in the project. The following statistics represent current enrollment:

Current Enrollment: 90

Male: 46% Female: 51% Hispanic: 86% White: 4% Black: 3% Asian: 1%

Youth from Single Parent Households: 42%

Homeless Youth: 4%

Percentage of Youth who have remained in school: 70%

Percentage of Youth who have not re-offended: 95%

A key aspect of the success of the Youth Offender Project can be attributed to the enrollment of participant's parents and/or extended family members. Parents enrolled in the project learn important parenting skills with an understanding that parental involvement is key to prevention. Family members learn the warning signs of gang membership in order to better direct their children away from gang recruitment.

In addition to the Project's extensive outreach activities (attachment 1); the Youth Offender Project funds the publication of a monthly network providers' newsletter (attachment 2) as well as the Youth Helpline Directory (attachment 3). The Helpline Directory is a comprehensive listing of referral agencies including social services, health care, rehabilitation programs, churches and faith-based programs, employment and educational services. The Helpline is an important resource for parents, social service workers, and the community-at-large. Through a memorandum of agreement with the Youth Offender Project, agencies included in the Helpline Directory provide services for Youth Offender Project referrals at no charge.

Project Expansion

Youth Offender Project staff has gained important insight and experience in working with at-risk youth during the demonstration pilot period. These experiences are the impetus for a planned project expansion beginning in 2005. Expansion activities include reaching into middle and grade schools for gang intervention and education. This need was identified by the project coordinator as a result of EPPD and area school referrals of children (some as young as 7 years of age) to the Youth Offender Project. In one case a child (7 years of age), whose parents were members of a gang, was found to be a drug courier or "mule". This child, at age 7 identified himself as having "jumped-in" to the gang and participated in gang related initiation rites. The project will expand and develop curriculum specifically targeting these at-risk children.

Another area of expansion targets the children of incarcerated parents who belong to prison gangs. This area of expansion targets the intergenerational aspects of gang involvement in order to break the cycle of families trapped by familial ties to gang participation. Intergenerational gang activity is becoming increasingly evident in the community. One specific prison gang in El Paso targeted for intervention is the "Aztecas". Additionally, the project will examine the possibility of targeting young people recruited by the "La Eme" gang that is identified with the Mexican Mafia. "La Eme" actively recruits children into their gang (10-15 years of age) to serve as "mules" for drug running from Juarez to El Paso.

Project Staff

Annalisa Tucker is the project coordinator and has extensive experience working with youth. She has encountered all aspects of the at-risk youth population including pregnant teens, youth with disabilities, teens that are sexually active and have sexually transmitted diseases. As a professional licensed Social Worker, she is dedicated to providing quality case management and resource guidance for at-risk youth. Ms. Tucker has worked in colonias and rural areas as well as urban communities. With over ten years experience in community networking, she brings much strength to the project regarding resource management for youth. She was drawn to working with gang prevention and gang intervention after observing that gang activity in El Paso has increasingly become a gateway for this economically challenged population. Her goal for the project is to provide at-risk youth with the critical thinking skills and opportunities to make better decisions and incorporate educational attainment and employment as life goals.

Officer Enrique Davila provides a unique EPPD perspective for at-risk youth enrolled in the project. Most of the youth that he works with have only negative encounters with law enforcement agencies. Officer Davila helps to break down barriers by demonstrating the values, mission, and purpose of law enforcement. Through his daily interaction and support for project participants, these young people begin to see law enforcement in a different light - now there is communication where previously there was hostility. Officer Davila teaches courses on gang prevention, life skills and pre-employment opportunities. Many young people enrolled in the project suffer from poor parenting or no parents and are receptive to Officer Davila as a positive role model. For Officer Davila, gang prevention and intervention can only be accomplished "one youth at a time".

Funding Request

Demonstration funding for the Youth Offender Project is due to end by December 2004. The EPPD is in the process of seeking institutional funding for the Project. However, the process of institutionalizing the operational aspects of the program will not be accomplished in the 2005 fiscal year budget. With DOL funding slated to end December 2004, the Youth Offender Program respectfully requests operational funding from the Hervey Foundation in the amount of $9,686 to continue this vital program into 2005. The success of the project to date is due to the commitment and dedication of its staff. Consequently, Hervey Foundation funding will be utilized towards 10% of the personnel costs in order to ensure the continuation of the project.

Smiling Valeria Gardea, seven-year-old Lamar Elementary School Student

Valeria, a Story of Compassion and Courage...

This story is about a courageous little girl, seven-year old Valeria Gardea, a student at Lamar Elementary School, who was referred to the Multi-Agency Referral System (MARS) in August 2003, by Officer Sylvia Weaver from Central Regional Command Center. Although a bright little girl, facial deformities from a cleft palate prevented her from progressing at her age grade level; she had physical challenges as well as educational and medical needs. On Thursday, March 25, 2004, Valeria took the first step of a long process to correct this birth condition. Her treatments will require travel to Dallas, Texas, for extensive medical attention. Through the MARS program, Valeria will receive treatment from the Craniofacial Institute in Dallas that will be taking care of her follow-up examinations after each surgery. The El Paso Community Foundation will be assisting with travel expenses and a charity to assist with the expenses has been set up at Government Employees Credit Union under Valeria Gardea. The MARS program is a part of the Youth Initiative Program (YIP).
